"WET" OR "DRY"

The Township of Aurelius Will Vote on It Dec. 8.

The "Whisky Question" is one that has held the attention of the people of Macksburg and vicinity for nearly a year past. Macksburg had been a "wet" town until last spring. At the election last spring, which was a most exciting one, a "dry" council was elected. This council ordered the saloons closed. The saloons were closed in the village, but as there was no election held in Jefferson township. Noble county, which extends down to the edge of the village, the saloon man built a house near the village and started a saloon. Jefferson township then held an election and by a close vote became "dry." The saloon men then claimed that the "dry" people of Dexter City had taken too much interest in the matter, and decided to put a saloon close to Dexter City, which has been "dry" for years. They accordingly put up a saloon in Enoch township, opposite Dexter City. The "dry" people of this vicinity had an election and by a close vote ousted the saloons from that township. Now the saloon men say that they will bring whisky back to Macksburg and Aurelius township; an election will be held on December 8 to vote on the question "wet" or "dry" for the township. Both sides claim that victory will be theirs.

A TENNESSEE ROMANCE.

One to be transported among the most romantic Southern scenes has only to see the production of "A Romance of Coon Hollow," which will hold the stage at the Auditorium Thanksgiving night, November 29th. Here, mirrored by nature in beauty and quaintness, are given pictures of life in old Tennessee. It is a story of love and jealousy, told in a graceful way, and given realism by stage effects that are reflections of every day life in the South. Among the scenes are a plantation cotton press in operation, and a moonlight revelation of the famous Glen Coon Hollow, with electric and lime light effects, in which the firebugs flit through the trees and the night birds sing among the branches. Another, a night view, depicts the historic boat race between the Mississippi River steamboats, Robert E. Lee and Natchez, brilliantly lighted and under full steam. On the levee a bevy of dainty boys and girls troop down to see the vessels pass, and indulge while waiting in jubilee singing and buck and wing dancing. A well selected company will appear in the production, now in its seventh season. Seats on sale at Gates Book Store.

Canning Meat in China.

Just before the outbreak of the present troubles a canning factory was established at Chin-Kiang, the intention being to supply European markets with tinned meats, more especially game and wild fowl. The supply of wild fowl, at a ridiculously small price, is practically unlimited in that part of the celestial empire.

Buchanan, Mich., May 22. Genesee Pure Food Co., Le Roy, N. Y. Gentlemen—My mamma has been a great coffee drinker and has found it very injurious. Having used several packages of your GRAN-O, the drink that takes the place of coffee, she finds it much better for herself and for us children to drink. She has given up coffee drinking entirely. We use a package of GRAN-O every week. I am ten years old. Yours respectfully, FANNIE WILLIAMS.

Venezuela, It is Reported, May Secure the Famous Atalanta.

Venezuela and not Colombia may secure Jay Gould's old steam yacht Atalanta, according to a report persistently circulated during the last few days. Colombia negotiated for the vessel last summer and the transaction was said to be closed, the purchase price, according to the contract, being named as $120,000. Before matters came to a head, however, but after half of the purchase price had been paid, there was a revolution in Colombia, President Sanclemente being deposed and superseded by Vice President Marroquin. It was said that the Colombian government intended to use the yacht given to the insurgents by Venezuela. Colombia's option on the yacht expired about a month ago, and she still lies at the Erie basin, where she was taken to receive her armament when the question of converting her into a cruiser was first mooted. No guns, however, were ever placed on board of her except her saluting cannon.

THINKS PEARY HAS FAILED.

Elvelyn Baldwin Believes Explorer's Dash for the Pole is Checked.

Elvelyn Baldwin, who is in charge of the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition that is to start out in 1901 in search of the north pole, stopped in Boston on his way to Nova Scotia. In speaking of the report from Edinburgh that the Scotch whaler Edipse had returned to Dundee with members of the Stein expedition to Ellsmere land, Mr. Baldwin said that if it were true that Lieut. Peary did not get under way from the headquarters at Etah until last August it would seem to show that again he had been hampered in his efforts to reach Port Conger in time to make a dash for the port early next spring. Mr. Baldwin thinks that Peary will remain during the coming winter at Port Conger and make the effort in the spring and summer of 1901.

"We are left to surmise what has become of the Fram," said Mr. Baldwin. "It seems singular no news has come from Capt. Sverdrup. I consider, however, that there is no cause to be over-anxious concerning the safety of either Lieut. Peary, Capt. Sverdrup or the Windward."

BIG ALASKA WIRE READY.

Military Telegraph Line Now Completed to International Border.

Gen. Greeley, chief signal officer, has received a dispatch saying that the military telegraph line has been completed from Port Egbert, or Eagle City, Alaska, to the international boundary line near Dawson. The Canadian line extends from the boundary to Dawson and from that city southward to Skagway.

There is a gap of about 35 miles in the line from Dawson to Quesnelle and the Canadian company is considering the advisability of covering this line by couriers during the winter. The building of the line had to be abandoned on account of severe weather.

As the line reaches Skagway it is within three days' sail of the telegraph office at Victoria, and this brings the troops of the United States at Port Egbert within telegraphic communication with the war department at Washington save the three days' delay.

It stands alone, it towers above. There's no other, its nature's wonder, a warming poultice to the heart of mankind. Such as Rocky Mountain Tea. Ask your druggist.

WILHELMINA'S HUSBAND.

Prince Henry Will Not Cut Any Figure in Netherland Politics.

The future prince consort of Holland, Prince Henry, will not be an important personage politically. In fact, he will have no excuse for mixing in politics if he had the desire to do so. He may share the queen's popularity by being just the good husband of his wife, an exemplary head of society and, above everything else, a patriot. The parliament, the cabinet, the council of state (in which the regency was vested) for all purposes of government exercise legislative and executive power. They are the root, stem and branch. The queen is the flower. Her husband has no place in the constitution and would be ill-advised indeed to try to create one, says a foreign exchange.

Although Prince Henry bears a high rank in the German army, he is not a German. The proud boast of his house is that they are Wends—that is to say, Slavs. Nothing annoyed the late comte de Paris more than to read in the papers that he was the son of a German princess. He claimed that she was a Wend. As a child, she was called by her erudite tutor "the queen of the Wends." The grand dukes of Mecklenburg-Schwerin have also been from time immemorial princes of the Wends. The high sense of dignity shown by their daughters in not changing their religion, as they might a garment, is surely no German characteristic.

MAKE GOOD DETECTIVES.

Many Women Seem Adapted to the Work of Ferreting Out Crimes.

In New York city and the surrounding towns almost 100 women are engaged in detective work; in Chicago the number of women similarly employed is quite large, says the Chronicle. A large percentage of these women are employed in the big stores, where shoplifting is so commonly practiced, that the head of one large establishment said: "We could no more do without a detective in this store than we could do without a model to show off our gowns." The dodges of shoplifters are innumerable. Some wear long capes and slip lengths of silk or passementerie, feathers and handkerchiefs under their arms; others wear outer skirts with long slits concealed by the gathings, so that they can slip their thefts into pockets in an underdress known as a "kickshirt." Handkerchiefs and gloves are tucked into muffs and bodices, and, worse than all, children are pressed into the service. One successful woman thief tucks lace and embroidery and any knick-knacks she can lay hands on down the backs of her two little children, who are exquisitely dressed; others instruct their small daughters to take anything that is put in their way. Children of eight and nine make clever shoplifters. Sometimes two women work together and then it is very difficult for the detective to trap them. Women detectives are valued and well paid when they are skilful.

TREASURES OF AZTEC TIMES.

Valuable Archaeological Objects Found in the Calle de las Escalerillas.

The work that has been carried on in the Calle de las Escalerillas for the laying of the sewer mains has led to important archaeological discoveries, for, as is well known, that street, as well as the present cathedral, formed part of the site of the great temple of Huizilopochtli, the Aztec god of war.

The latest discoveries seem to be the most important of all. Foremost among them are two figures of the god Ehecatl (god of air), the companion of Quetzacoatl. One of these figures is painted red, yellow and black, and, in spite of the dampness of the ground where it has lain for centuries, the colors have remained fresh and vivid.

These idols are adorned with disks of gold, which are polished and engraved in a remarkable manner, says the Mexican Herald. The disks are about 20 centimeters in diameter and the gold plate is of fair thickness.

Other objects found at the same time were four ear ornaments of gold, a gold jewel case belonging to the god of air, beads, amulets of green stone, axes of silex, small idols of stone, lances of sharp stones, a curious mask of pyrite of iron, knives of large dimensions, a mask of obsidian, censers of earthenware painted in colors and many other figures of stone and cement, the latter being always polychromatic.

Vermont Gains in Population.

Vermont, according to the census report, has gained 11,219 in population the past ten years, its population now being 343,641, as against 332,422 in 1890. It is interesting to note that during this same period the large places—Barre, Bellows Falls, Bennington, Burlington, Montpelier and St. Johnsbury—have gained over 15,000, so the small towns, the rural sections of the state, must have lost quite a few people. This is, however, only what is happening in nearly all the eastern states—the cities are gaining at the expense of the country.

Rats in Japan.

There are perhaps in no other country of the world so many rats as in Japan. The wooden buildings with their straw roofs offer the best lurking places for them. Whilst we use dogs and cats to get rid of the rats, the Japanese employ for the same purpose a certain kind of snake, the "dodaishees," a blue-green viper. They are sometimes as long as seven feet, and are said to be the best rat catchers in the world.

CATS BROUGHT ILL LUCK.

Things Seemed to Be Coming His Way But There Must Have Been One Cat Too Many.

"We are more or less suspicious when it comes to black cats," said a well-known young man about town to a Washington Star reporter, "and I was one of the firmest believers in the black cat good-luck superstition in Washington until a few days ago. I had gotten tired of doing the same thing in my department over and over every day in the year, and, being a member of one of the learned professions, I decided to attempt to secure a transfer to another department, where my training could be put to advantage to myself and incidentally to the government."

"I am from a state where the senior senator is a power in state and national politics; a man almost unapproachable by reason of his prominence, but who is personally one of the staunchest of friends to his friends, and whose recommendation usually carries, as it is seldom given. I happen to be one of his friends."

"Next to myself, the person most interested in my ambition was my sweetheart. One night about a month ago, on our return from the theater, on her doorstep sat a jet black cat with a white star on its breast. The cat followed us in the house in the most friendly manner, refused to go out until it was time for my departure, and then followed me to the sidewalk. My best girl, in a rhapsody of delight, declared that it was ordained by the stars that I was to get my appointment."

"Two or three days later, on the eve of my departure for the great and wicked city which is my home, I stepped into a restaurant on Eleventh street for lunch. A cat as black as ink, with a white star on its breast, came in the door, walked right up to my table, and remained there until I finished my meal. When I told my sweetheart about the cat's visit when I saw her that evening, she had another spasm of delight, saying that defeat for me was impossible."

"I left for home about two weeks ago, and on the very first night of my arrival, as I was leaving the hotel, a big black cat with a white star on its breast came out of the cafe and rubbed its arched back against my shins. I returned at once to the writing-room and wrote my girl about it. I received by return mail a letter of 18 closely written pages, explaining that with the third black cat thus thrust in my pathway my appointment was inevitable, and that she could hardly contain her joy."

"On the day before I was to see the senator I stopped at Shanley's, on Broadway, for lunch. I was paralyzed with delight when the fourth black cat suddenly came up to my table and purred about my feet in the most friendly manner."

"Need I tell you that the senator was kindness and graciousness itself, and lauded my ambition to get up in the line of my chosen profession? Need I say that the endorsements of my district leader and congressional candidates and those of my professional friends were literally thrown at my head? Need I say that my sweetheart wrote me an 18-page, double-lined letter every day, telling me that I couldn't lose? Need I add that everything in the big city I wanted came my way? Is it not idle to tell you that one of the great men who directs the councils of his party, and who is a power therein, united with the senator in an endorsement which, had it been at the beginning of the administration, ought to have given me an assistant secretaryship, and perhaps wished me luck?"

"And need I tell you that the cabinet officer to whom I presented my papers frankly told me that having no places vacant he could not give me one? That I had my trouble for my pains, and that the four black cats threw me down hard? That my sweetheart's nose and eyes were so red from weeping that she could not go to the theater, and that I have for disposal the strongest set of endorsements which can be picked up on Pennsylvania avenue in an hour's walk?"

Carious Irish Pledge.

A society has been formed in Ireland for the purpose of pushing the sale of Irish goods and putting a stop to the sale of foreign goods under Irish "colors." This society is called the Irish Shop Assistants' Industrial League, and is the result of a resolve among young men patriotically disposed to serve Irish goods wherever possible. The members sign a pledge which runs as follows: "I hereby promise to do my utmost to sell an Irish made article on every possible occasion (when not detrimental to my employer's interests), and to do all in my power to promote the objects of the league for the purpose of upraising the industries of country."—N. Y. Herald.

Bread and Milk for Society.

Many women of fashion are following the rather widespread custom of a large number of business men of weak digestion and have acquired the notion that a return to the bread and milk of their childhood is a good thing for them physically and mentally. They have, in fact, in some places given bread and milk something of a standing as a luncheon "dish," either as the whole meal or as an appetizer. The order is served in dainty bowls of the most delicate china and artistic shape.—Chicago Chronicle.
